THE EDUCATION INQUIRY.

JUDGING from the fact that during recent discussions frequent references have been made to the operation of the Privy Council System in England, it occurs to us that it would not be unacceptable to our readers if we presented to them some portions of the evidence taken by the Select Committee of the House of Commons last year—those parts being selected for quotation which seem to bear most directly on the matters in debate amongst us.

Mr. Lingen was the first witness. He has been secretary to the Committee of Council for Education for fifteen years, and has seen the grant rise from £75,000 to £840,000 a year. On the very important point of combining the central superintendence with local organisation he was questioned as follows :

" Is it your opinion that the efficiency of the office, and the facility with which the office superintends the education of the country, so far as it goes, would be assisted by the establishment of some local organization?—Yes, I have a very strong opinion on the point."

" Is it your opinion that, even as matters stand now, and still more if some system were devised by aid and assistance could be extended to those 11,000 parishes, it would be possible to carry it out really with efficiency and economy without the aid of some local organization?—No, I do not think it would."

" Is there any suggestion upon the subject of the addition of local organisation in connection with this question of the system of administration which you would wish to make to the committee?—I have no plan actually worked out, but I could suggest something.—My own impression is very strongly that the organisation of the parish schools in Scotland affords a type well worth studying for this country, but I have not worked that out in detail."

" When you speak of the organisation of parochial schools in Scotland, what do you mean by organisation?—The Hierarchy's Board.

" With reference to the administrative powers of such Board, or to their mode of taxation that you would prefer that system?—The main point that I have in view is decentralisation on to really responsible shoulders."

" Is it your opinion that the present office is capable of expansion to an indefinite extent, and that the present mode of organisation would be capable of administering larger grants much more extensively throughout the country at present?—The present questioner would be quite capable of administering a large grant throughout the country, but, I think, without some change in the country itself supporting a local organisation."

" You do not think an enlargement of the corps of inspectors would be sufficient to carry out the administration of a much larger grant to a greater number of schools without the aid of local organisation?—I see no reason why not in the way of it; I think it would be a more costly system."

" Is it your opinion that a local organisation should be entrusted in any way with the administration of a central grant, or with local rates?—My idea, so far as I have at all realised it, is this, that the central grant might be given in aid of a local contribution, but paid—not it is now to the individual school, but to the local authority, whatever it might be finally determined to be, in the district, parish, or town, of which they would be the direct, natural, and proper objects of payment."

" And you would wish to see a parochial organisation in England?—I should like to see a local organisation. I use the word 'local' advisedly, because I am not prepared to say whether or not a Board exactly like the Board of Hierarchy in Scotland would be the best Board in England, but so far as the parochial Board in Scotland is a local Board, I should like to see it in England."

" But we might have a county board, or a Board for a large district, and the organisation might be in minute divisions similar to those in Scotland; would you like to see in England anything so minute as the parochial organisation in Scotland?—I should prefer the local organisation which would have the best chance of being adopted in this country; whether it be based on the county, the union, or the parish, I should like to see it in England."

" And you would wish to see a parochial organisation in England?—I should like to see a local organisation."

" Human remains were found in the bush at Port Edgar, near Hay, on the 18th instant.

The Dairymen's Inn, at Gerringong, was burnt down on Saturday last.

Mr. Brownlow, of No. 1 Company of Volunteer Engineers, was the silver cup in the ninth match—which came off on Friday last, the 6th instant. Rainy weather prevented the first race in the All-comers Match on Saturday. The shooting at the Naval Brigade and the Volunteer Artillery at the garrison gun matches on that day was very good.

William Purse has been committed, from the coroner's court to take his trial for manslaughter in respect of his having caused the death of Margaret Fitzgerald.

" But we might have a county board, or a Board for a large district, and the organisation might be in minute divisions similar to those in Scotland; would you like to see in England anything so minute as the parochial organisation in Scotland?—I should prefer the local organisation which would have the best chance of being adopted in this country; whether it be based on the county, the union, or the parish, I should like to see it in England."

The Warrant Officers and A. B.'s of the Naval Brigade presented, on Saturday last, a handsome wreath of sovereigns to Mr. Reeve, their drill instructor.

The interesting little fern (Asplenium trichomanes) has recently been collected by Mrs. Selkirk and Miss Atkinson, at Bundanoon Creek, about fourteen miles from Berima. This diminutive plant, when in a flourishing state, has a very interesting appearance, from the contrast between its black stipes and rachis and the bright green pinnae. In Europe, it finds its natural home in old masonry and among the crevices of rocks.

A walking match for £100, between Hincks and Last Saturday afternoon. The distance was one mile and a half, or six times round the course, and the time consumed by Hincks (the winner) in walking it was twelve minutes fifty seconds. The match was won with a lead of about two hundred yards.

The weather during the week has for the most part been very fine, but at times rather inclined to be windy. The thermometer has shown a very considerable variation. Rain is still much wanted.

The Bishop of Sydney has visited the Kaima district, and held Confirmation services.

The distribution of the uniforms to the members of the West Maitland Company of Volunteers, took place last Thursday week. The new uniform is a handsome one, and much more appropriate than the dark blue in which the Maitland Volunteers for the last two years have appeared, the material of the new uniform being light grey tweed, with scarlet facings.

There was a considerable fall of rain at Armidale on Friday last.

Public meetings have been held on the subject of the Public Schools Bill—some in favour of that measure and some against it. On Monday evening last a public meeting was held against the bill in the Hall of St. Mary's Seminary, and a petition adopted and numerously signed. On the same night a numerous meeting was held in the hall of the Congregational school-house, Surry Hills. Similar meetings also held in favour of the measure on the same night at the School of Arts, Newtown, and at the Municipal Chambers, Paddington. There was likewise a meeting in favour of the bill at Woolloola on Tuesday night, and another against it at St. John's, Darlinghurst, on the following evening. Similar meetings have also been held at Concord, Balmain, and elsewhere. On Thursday night there was a large meeting at the Masonic Hall, in York-street, in favour of certain large modifications in the bill.

The Legislative Assembly was counted out on Tuesday evening last on Mr. Buchanan's motion for the summary cancellation of pastoral reserves. Mr. John Stewart was addressing the House at the time.

On Sunday last we received news of the arrival of the mail in Queensland via Batavia, and on Tuesday the mail steamer Ruahine arrived here from Panama via Wellington. On the same day (the instant before the arrival of the Ruahine) we received news of the arrival of the branch steamer Rangitata at Adelaide, with the European mail per Bombay. Thus there was an arrival of three mails from England by three different routes within the compass of three days.

Information was received at Bathurst last Tuesday that the store of Mr. Trollope, at Teapot Swamp, was struck up on Monday night, when goods to a large amount were taken away. Mr. Trollope was in Bathurst at the time.

Amongst the recent deaths (not elsewhere mentioned) we have to record the two following cases:—An accident happened at Maddington, near Armidale, on a day or two ago. Some rifles exploded, killing a man named Morris. At the moment Morris was holding a horse when it suddenly shied, and caused a movement of the gun, which went off.

" And if it be made by the State, do you think it must be by some system of local rating?—I think so, if it is to be done on sound principles."

Mr. Lincoln's opinion will of course be taken for what it is worth, but he has been in a position admirably adapted for forming a true opinion. He has watched the rise and progress of the system, and has been minutely familiar with the details of its successes and its failures, its difficulties and its defects. With the natural bias of an official in favour of his own department, he yet candidly avows himself "not content." The system is not, and cannot be, broadly National. It was intended to be provisional and assisting. It presumed that the great burden of support would rest on private liberality while it is fast throwing that burden on the State. But while the State was getting the burden it is not getting adequate educational results or possession of the authority to enforce those results. It has created a barrier between itself and the teachers, and is deprived of the direct action necessary to enable it to effect prompt and thorough reforms. The Privy Council system is shown to be essentially antagonistic to municipal action in educational matters, and yet local rates are declared to be essential to a complete provision for the wants of the community. Only by local rates can excessive centralisation be checked and the labour, as well as the possible tyranny, of the central department be lightened. Only by local rates can extravagance be thoroughly kept at bay, and an interested municipal supervision be secured. The value of local rates has been abundantly illustrated in Scotland, in all the States of America, and in Canada, and it is declared to be essential in England if the still destitute parishes are to be rapidly supplied with schools.

The Literary Institute at Balmain had an open night on Tuesday, the 9th instant. It is generally considered that the second reading of the Education Bill may be taken as settling the principle that the two Boards are to be amalgamated.

THE CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS OF SYDNEY.

(From the Sydney Mail.)

The building used for the purposes of this charity was originally, we believe, a cavalry barrack, and subsequently a barracks for newly arrived immigrants. It is a brick building of "the old school." That is to say, it is constructed in a more substantial manner than most of the buildings erected at the present time, but it is not of a model due to character. We do not pretend to say that it is that which is made in these days is less enduring than those which were made in the old Government buildings, but such is the fact.

The School of Industry is, however, a less pretentious structure than many others of about the same date. The windows, especially those on the upper story, are smaller, and the ceilings are lower. But the rooms are, nevertheless, of fair height, and, as we have already said, well ventilated.

The rooms are comfortable—there are no communal rooms, a school-room, and a dining-room, a roomy kitchen, a store, a laundry, &c.

There is no proper bath-room, as one would expect to find in such an establishment, but ample arrangements have been made, nevertheless, to ensure personal cleanliness, by the means of large tubs used in lieu of plunge baths; and the supply of water is most abundant. The whole establishment is in fair condition, and there are various other means of support.

Occasional legacies for instance. There is a considerable reserve fund to the credit of the institution, but its precise extent cannot be gathered from the balance-sheet. The amount remaining in the balance-sheet is £2,616 1s. 4d. The amount paid for school charges—Macquarie, £1,111 1s. 1d.; Sampson, £1,020 1s. 1d.; Macpherson, £1,020 1s. 1d.; Total, £3,152 1s. 1d.

TELEGRAPHIC MESSAGES.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.)

FORBES.

SATURDAY.
The Court House was entered by thieves between 5 and 6 o'clock, this morning, and the safe, weighing upwards of 14 cwt., carried off to a distance of about 100 yards. The thieves did not succeed in opening the safe. A night patrol is much wanted here.

Mining matters are very dull.

MELBOURNE.

SATURDAY.

The Hunt Club Races were well attended to-day. In the race for the Cup, Banker was first, Freerader second. For the Metropolitan Steeplechase, Ballara first, Bluekin second, Strander third. This was a fine race.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

LONDON, August 25th, 1866.
The venerated maxims of antiquity are not, we are reminded by the Times, invariably correct. "It used to be," says that journal, "to be a favourite saying with diplomats, especially French diplomats—that between Austria and Prussia there could never be other than enmity or sincere friendship."

They might wrangle to the end of time they might even fight to the death, but they would always keep their swords like that of Archduke Leopold, which is half drawn from the scabbard, but some leus ex machina was sure to come forward at the critical moment and induce them to thrust it back into its scabbard again! The news I communicated last month will have shown you how great a fallacy this was. Austria had actually received crushed and beaten from Prussia, and from Prussia, circumstances similar to those described by Dr. Russell in his Modern Europe (vol. i, p. 233) when he says that the victory which Frederick the Great won on the 10th April, 1741, over Maria Theresa at Melsztyn, near Neiss, "was acquired solely by the prowess of the Prussian Infantry, and their victory inuring in consequence of a new exercise of the art of war."

Now that the sword has done its work, or rather the needle gun and rifle cannon, for the swords stand now as a mere symbol of expression for strife mainly waged with other weapons, the diplomats are busy, and Austria, who has the credit of gaining over the continental green-haze what she cannot gain by arms, has not got all her own way. In fact she is compelled to accept the result of the battle of Austerlitz, but still very unwillingly. That was the secret of the state or personal belongings either of the individual or the nation which is usually known by the expression "loss" is not always loss in fact, but rather gain. Sometimes such losses, when power insufficient to vitality or an extensive area, turn out to be gained, because the power concentrated, has been, wielded with greater care and ability, and has been more judiciously applied than the other.

Such would be, in my opinion, the case with Austria. She may be complimented on her loss, if she know how to benefit by it, and will be advised by the Deak party in Hungary, who strongly recommend the consolidation of the empire, and the grouping together of the Hungarian and German parts of the empire, which can be said that she has descended to anything like the position of the Emperor of Austria elsewhere in Europe.

The first symptoms of these effects are already visible. It is now a common report that the Pope has proposed to cede the government of the City of Rome into the hands of the French Emperor, wh. is to be constituted Vicar of the Church of Rome, and the Pope is away, the Chartists riots have subsided, the sanguinary reports of war correspondents have ceased, and the English public are discussing exciting topics at present than those which arise out of the transactions of Sections D, E, F of the British Association at Nottingham, under the able presidency of Mr. Grove, Q.C., or the meetings of the Archaeological Society at Hastings, or the reception of ex-Governor Eyre by the gentlemen of Southampton. The sportmen are awaiting the 1st of September, and the political quietudes the advent of the agricultural meetings, when will be unrolled the programme of next session.

towards Austria, amongst the upper and ultramontane classes, I discover a general satisfaction concerning the ascendancy gained by Protestant Prussia. Through the influence of the heaviest blow which it has received since the French Revolution. The religious aspects of the war are well discussed in a number of month, a situation in which I was surprised to find so able and liberal a paper. The arrogation to themselves, by a small body of men, to be the depositaries of theological and moral truth, seems to me to be a most absurd and vicious. The Papal system suffered a severe coup de main by the French Revolution in that volcanic country. The writer in that journal contrasts the effects produced by that movement in France, and the Reformation in this and some other countries. He shows that in both one result followed—the clergy being deposed from their supremacy, the State was taken into partnership, and the lead of the first principles known throughout as State and Church. The State acting as the executive of the Church, but also resuming to be what it was not before, the moral ruler of its own citizens. This identity is not possible in any Roman Catholic country, save the State of the Church. In all others the State must either obey the Church, or put itself in an attitude of antagonism to it by the assertion of its principles. The former course of time must not only entail upon itself the ultimate chains on the part of the clergy. The government that has assumed the position in the progress of opinion, when it feels itself strong enough to favour one class of opinion, will certainly set them all on the same fowling-walk in fact in the way the Government of the United States, and many of our colonies have acted, which is bound to be so obvious on the part of the State, that the circumstance is a growth of lay power totally opposed to the subjection imposed upon human thought by the prelates of Rome, and perhaps the loss to the ecclesiastical system is not in the loss of the temporal power which must ensue, so much as it is in the deposition of papal Austria from the leadership of Germany, and the substitution of Prussia, as the principal power in Europe, which might other's hearts, the swords like that of Archduke Leopold, be half drawn from the scabbard, but some leus ex machina was sure to come forward at the critical moment and induce them to thrust it back into its scabbard again!

NEW SOUTH WALES RIFLE ASSOCIATION.

PRESIDENT OF PRIZES.

THE finale to the Sixth Annual Prize Meeting of the New South Wales Rifle Association—the bold and enterprising spirit of distribution of prizes to the various contingents—was held on Saturday last.

The design of His Holiness is, of course, to secure himself. He considers, doubtless, that the Emperor will assist him in making terms with Victor Emmanuel, so that he may enjoy a residence at Rome while the Italian Government shall take up its permanent residence at Florence—and thus kings future shall receive their crowns from the Pontiff. Such a course, however, is not likely to be the desire of the Pope, but looking at the state of public opinion in Italy I do not think it can last long.

What the French Emperor will do in the matter it is difficult to say. His office has been no sinecure during the past two months. The trouble the Austrian gift of Venetia has given him may induce him to make the best of the position he holds. His present indisposition of health may naturally account for that repose which ambitious men place out of their reach. Those who aware by the sagacity of this "dark man" are rather disconcerted. Events have somewhat impeded his reputation for supernatural wisdom and piercing discernment. A succession of blunders have followed one another, and must have gone to a diver the unreasoning faith reported in his success.

The French-made Emperor of Mexico is at present in Paris trying to arrange for the seat withdrawal of her husband Maximilian and their effects from that turbulent seat of government in which French bayonets could not secure them. The loss of prestige, treasure, and life that venture has been great and depressing. We then notice the complication and difficulty of the position he holds in consequence of his acceptance of Venetia from Austria, and the attempt to interfere there; and lastly that is the inevitable mistake of the last fortnight. At the close of the war, when Prussia is flushed with victory, the Emperor deems it a fitting time to secure a rectification of boundary by demanding a cession of the Rhenish provinces by Prussia. At the eastern side of a Union Jack, was erected for the accommodation of the Vienna regatta. Here it was that the prizes were delivered. This structure fronted the west, a large space before it being kept clear, in order that the volunteers and military might assemble for the ceremony of the Association's annual meeting to be held on the 1st of September. Late continental experiences have shown that in the direction which the use of arms must inevitably take, and he had no doubt that the Rifles Association and the Volunteers will be called upon to defend the public interest.
